

Dr. María Nazarena Perez Bertana graduated with honors as a medical doctor from the University of Buenos Aires in 2010. She completed her residency in Internal Medicine at the Foundation for the Fight against Childhood Neurological Diseases (FLENI, by its acronym in Spanish), obtaining her specialist title granted by the Argentine Society of Medicine in 2014. Following this, she became a specialist in Rheumatology in 2018.

She has participated in research projects presented at local congresses of internal medicine and rheumatology, and has also been a rheumatology lecturer at the University of Favaloro.

Currently, she works as a staff physician in clinical hospitalization at the Foundation for the Fight against Childhood Neurological Diseases (FLENI). She actively participates in the training of medical residents. Additionally, she practices as a rheumatologist at the Sanatorio Finochietto.

Dr. Pérez Bertana has a clinical outlook with experience in neurology and rheumatology. She provides personalized care with an emphasis on primary health prevention and immunity.